

Biography

Miriam Magdy Aziz Marzouk is a 39 year old Egyptian female who is currently a lecturer of Pediatrics Emergency and Critical Care at Cairo University Specialized Children Hospital since 2014 and Deputy Director of Cairo University Specialized Pediatric Hospital (CUSPH) since January 2017. After graduating from medical school, Kasr Al Ainy, Cairo University in 2004, she passed a 3 years of residency for pediatrics followed by passing a master degree in 2010, then a doctorate degree of pediatric emergency and critical care in 2014. She had worked as a pediatric ICU consultant at Cairo University since 2014 and for two years (2016-2018) at Maadi Military Hospital and National Institute of Diabetes and Endocrinology. She became an International Board Certified Lactation Consultant in 2011 and a Pediatric and Neonatal Critical Ultrasound Basic Level 1 - Provider in 2015. She had supervised several thesis as part of her academic research since 2014. She attended several courses to upgrade her management and teaching skills including Hospital Management which was held in Japan and provided by Japanese International Cooperation Agency JICA (2018) as well as Conference Organization (2014), E-Learning (2013), Use of technology in teaching (2013), Research Ethics (2013), Communication skills (2013), The Credit Hour Systems (2013), Job Ethics (2010), Scientific Publishing (2010), Research Team Management (2010), Standards of quality in teaching (2010) and Competitive research projects (2010). She speaks 3 languages; Arabic (Native), English (Fluent) and French (Basic). Her skills include team management as well as ICU Skills including advanced pediatric life support, central line insertion, chest tube insertion, peritoneal dialysis, critical care ultrasound and mechanical ventilation including HFO.