Thesis: A General Equilibrium Analysis of Creating Fiscal Space for Egypt.
Faculty of Economics and Political Science, Cairo University.

Abstract: After reviewing the literature on fiscal space, the thesis tries to compare between the conventional ways and the efficiency-enhancing ways of fiscal space creation especially on the revenue-mobilization and public expenditure sides. The study uses Egypt as a case study. First, it analyzes the domestic feasible ways of creating fiscal space in Egypt by using the Egyptian tax effort index and by running Data Envelopment Analysis (DEA) to examine the efficiency of public spending. Second, the study uses a static Computable General Equilibrium (CGE) model to assess the macroeconomic impact of the different feasible ways from both a conventional and efficiency-enhancing perspectives. The results show that there is a room for creating fiscal space in Egypt using tax revenues and expenditure reform. The macroeconomic impact of all simulated tax and expenditure scenarios is contractionary in the short run; however the efficiency-enhancing ways may be economically preferable in both the short and long run.
